PURPOSE AND OUTCOME

Course Overview

Landmarks in psychiatric epidemiology are reviewed with an emphasis on student discovery of studies with enduring value.

Relation to Program Outcomes

Course covers critical historical development and methodological development in the field. Students are responsible for demonstrating competence in this knowledge through the successful completion of this course.

Goal:

After successfully completing the Landmarks in Psychiatric Epidemiology course, students will be able to evaluate the impacts of selected seminal research studies upon the field of Psychiatric Epidemiology, characterizing their historical significance, their influence upon common models and methodological approaches, their roots in socio-ecological or medically-centered paradigms, and their impact upon discipline-forming decisions, concept development, and key professional collaborations that have laid the foundation for the field of Psychiatric Epidemiology.

Learning Objectives:

Landmarks in Psychiatric Epidemiology students will be able to:

1. Appraise the impacts of selected seminal research studies upon the field of Psychiatric Epidemiology so that historical significance, influence upon common models and methodological approaches, roots in socio-ecological or medically-centered paradigms, and impacts upon discipline-forming decisions, concept development, and key professional collaborations are addressed. (Evaluation)
 - A. Characterize the historical significance of selected seminal research studies so that their methodological contributions, departures from previous paradigms, impacts upon the human condition, and notable effects upon the field of Psychiatric Epidemiology are addressed. (Analysis)
 - i. Summarize the findings of selected seminal research studies so that historical implications are addressed. (Comprehension)
 - B. Distinguish the psychological, sociological and ecological models that shaped seminal research studies and the influence of those studies on theoretical models and methodological approaches. (Analysis)

- i. Discuss the strengths and weaknesses of selected seminal research study designs so that validity, ethical considerations, and interpretation of findings are addressed. (Comprehension)
 - ii. Discuss the psychological, sociological and ecological models that shaped seminal research studies. (Comprehension)
 - iii. Determine the influence of chosen models upon the methodology of selected seminal research studies. (Comprehension)
- C. Distinguish the influence that selected seminal research studies have had upon discipline-forming decisions so that developments such as DSM and ICD criteria, theoretical model formation, etiological breakthroughs, integration of bio-statistical methods, advances in detection of neurobiological substrates, and the polarization of approaches to research are addressed. (Analysis)
- i. Trace the formation of concepts such as multimorbidity and comorbidity, present-state-examination, structured diagnostic interviewing and diagnosis to the work done in selected seminal research studies in Psychiatric Epidemiology. (Comprehension)
 - ii. Describe the impact made upon the discipline from key professional collaborations that occurred within or as a result of selected seminal research studies in Psychiatric Epidemiology. (Comprehension)

Instructional Methods

This course is taught online using a combination of work individually before the assigned on-line time, group work, student presentations and other active learning exercises and discussions. Please see below for more information on the “standard” content of each session. Class size given current format is limited to 10 students.

ACADEMIC REQUIREMENTS AND GRADING

Assignments

Each week you will be responsible for four tasks, which will be graded in three assignments:0

1. Reading the common reading for the class that will provide you with the study methodology and background when provided. This is graded through Assignments 1 and 3.

2. Reading a specific chapter or article and reporting on your reading to the class through a 3-5 minute video uploaded to canvas (or provide working video link). The readings/chapters you are responsible for each week will be assigned at the beginning of the semester. Please be warned: these readings are sometimes very long and each study requires an analysis of findings and methods first, in its historical context and, second, from a contemporary psychiatric epidemiological context. You are responsible for posting your presentation on the course Voice Thread page. Communicate the information from the chapter or reading you feel is essential. This requires that you delve in to the primary material.

This is graded as Assignment 1:

Points will be assigned as follows:

- 1 points for uploading the video or link on time (not on time, 0 points);
- Up to 3 points for describing important findings from the chapter or article (1 point each for a table, graph or text point illustrating an important finding based on analysis of the historical importance of the work to the field of psychiatric epidemiology; 0 points if no historically important finding highlighted);
- Up to 2 points for methods or implications as relevant (2 points if provide insightful discussion of both; 1 point for either alone; 0 if neither).

You are responsible for posting on Voice Thread by 9 am Wednesday morning in each class week. The video each week is worth a maximum of 6 points.

3. Watching all your fellow student's (and faculty presentations) and responding to each of the other presentations. This is graded as Assignment 2.

Points will be assigned as follows:

- 1 point for responding to some presentations
- 2 points for responding to each presentation
- 3 points for responding to each presentation and for promoting synthesis or application of the knowledge

4. Within three days of the closing of the module, post a 1 to 2 page summary and reflection piece on the study, clearly describing how the study fits the criteria for a landmark study (or doesn't) and what the historical importance of the study has proven to be. This is graded as Assignment 3:

You will receive 1 point for each module assuming you submit your paper as a posting on time and have responded to how/if the study qualifies as a landmark study, and the historical importance of the study.

Schedule & Grading

Week	Landmark Study	Assignment 1: Video Due Date (6 pts)	Assignment 2: Voice Stream Response for Each Presentation (3 pts)	Assignment 3: Summary and Reflection Paper (1 pt)	Total Points Each Week

This course will be graded satisfactory/unsatisfactory following the policies described here

<http://gradcatalog.ufl.edu/content.php?catoid=10&navoid=2020#grades>

This course is graded Satisfactory (S) or Unsatisfactory (U). Grade points are not given for S and U grades; S and U grades are not used to calculate grade point averages. Those with 40 to 60 points will be graded “satisfactory” and those with 59 or fewer points will be graded “unsatisfactory.”
